Correct Answers:

1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10
C	D	C	C	A	D	A	A	E	B

Explanations :

1. Fragment D, in bold, is already correct.

Fragment A: Because growth has

Here, because distorts the meaning of the statement as it implies that the nations suffers from stagflation because growth is high. This is clearly incorrect.

Correct: Although growth has

Fragment B: returned and an

This fragment is incorrect due to incorrect usage of article an. An is always to be followed by a vowel which is not the case here. The correct article would be the.

Correct: returned and the Fragment E: suffers after stagflation.

Here, suffering is because of something and not after something. The correct word would be from.

Correct: suffers from stagflation.

Fragment C is correct.

Hence, option C is correct.

2. Fragment D, in bold, is already correct.

Fragment A: The World Bank will

The event has already transpired and hence will is incorrect.

Correct: The World Bank has

Fragment B: created a disaster risk pooled

Here, 'pooled system' does not make sense. The correct word will be pooling.

Correct: created a disaster risk pooling

Fragment C: system those covers the

Here, the risk pooling system is singular and hence those is incorrect. that will be correct here.

Correct: system that covers the

Fragment E is correct.

Hence, option D is correct.

3. Fragment D, in bold, is already correct.

Fragment A: Lots of lenders is

Clearly, lenders are in plural and hence, are should be used instead of is.

Correct: Lots of lenders are

Fragment B: inhibited to offering more

Here, Inhibit means to hold back. Somebody holds back from doing something and hence, to is incorrect.

Correct: inhibited from offering more

Fragment E: write down formulas setting by regulators.

Here, we need an adjective while setting is a noun.

Correct: write down formulas set by regulators.

Fragment C is correct.

Hence, option C is correct.

4. Fragment B, in bold, is already correct.

Fragment A: Natural disasters has become

As per subject- verb agreement rules, has should be replaced with have

Correct: Natural disasters have become

Fragment C: effect poor countries,

Here, effect means result which renders the statement meaningless. Affect meaning impact, is correct here.

Correct: affect poor countries,

Fragment E: at vulnerable agricultural land

Poor nations make their living from agricultural lands which are vulnerable to natural disasters.

Correct: from vulnerable agricultural land

Fragment D is correct.

Hence, option C is correct.

5. Fragment A, in bold, is already correct.

Fragment C: steady of monetary

We need a noun while steady is an adjective.

Correct: steadiness of monetary

Fragment D: policy since a

The fragment does not make sense. We are talking about a specific financial crises and the correct article to be used is the.

Correct: policy since the

Fragment E: depths in the 2008 financial crisis

Here, the correct preposition here would be of for the sentence to make sense.

Correct: depths of the 2008 financial crisis

Fragment B is correct.

Hence, option A is correct.

6. Fragment A, in bold, is already correct.

Fragment B: a hostage for internal politics, with

The word for renders the statement meaningless. One is always a hostage to something.

Correct: a hostage to internal politics, with

Fragment C: different constituencies claiming they brings in

Here, the error lies in subject verb agreement. Constituencies should be followed by bring.

Correct: different constituencies claiming they bring in

Fragment D: sales, while argument that costs and capital

Here, the error is due to usage of a noun where a verb is needed.

Correct: sales, while arguing that costs and capital

Fragment E is correct.

Hence, option D is correct.

7. Fragment E, in bold, is already correct.

Fragment B: income have grown sharply

The sentence structure is incorrect as instead of have, has is to be used.

Correct: income has grown sharply

Fragment C: hence the crisis, and

Here, hence renders the statement meaningless. The correct word would be since.

Correct: since the crisis, and

Fragment D: has become even most

Here, we need the comparative form rather than superlative.

Correct: has become even more

Fragment A is correct.

Hence, option A is correct.

8. Fragment D, in bold, is already correct.

Fragment B: index series, it has.

We need the third person present form of be here which is is.

Correct: index series, it is

Fragment C: found that an dynamics

The use of article an indicates a vowel but is not so. The is the correct article here.

Correct: found that the dynamics

Fragment E: process have changed substantive

Here, substantive is an adjective while we need an adverb.

Correct: process have changed substantially

Fragment A is correct.

Hence, option A is correct.

9. All the fragments of the statement are correct and there is no error.

Hence, option E is correct.

10. Fragment E, in bold, is already correct.

Fragment A: The de-stress in rural areas was further

Destress means to relax after a period of work or tension and should be replaced by distress means extreme anxiety, sorrow, or pain.

Correct: The distress in rural areas was further

Fragment C: particularly construction, who has

The word who is not used for inanimate objects and is incorrect here. It should be replaced by which.

Correct: particularly construction, which has

Fragment D: been a source of alternatively employment

Here, we need an adjective instead of an adverb.

Correct: been a source of alternative employment

Fragment B is correct.

Hence, option B is correct.
