Hints to Remember

Who: Shanghai

What: Becomes World's First District With 5G Coverage

When: published on 1st April 2019

Shanghai has claimed that it has become the world's first district using both 5G coverage and broadband gigabit network as China seeks to establish lead over the US and other countries in the race to develop next generation cellular mobile communications.

5G is the next generation of cellular technology with download speeds that are 10 to 100 times faster than 4G LTE networks.

Shanghai has developed what it claims to be the first district boasting both 5G coverage and a broadband gigabit network, the state-run China Daily reported. Trial runs of the 5G network, backed by state-run telecom carrier China Mobile, officially started the service in Shanghai's Hongkou on Saturday, where 5G base stations had been deployed over the last three months to ensure full coverage, the report said.

Hints to Remember

Who: China

What: launched the Tianlian II-01 satellite

When: published on 1st April 2019

This is the first of China's second-generation data-tracking and relay satellites, which will provide services like data relay, measurement and control, and transmission to manned spacecraft, satellites, carrier rockets and non-spacecraft users.

Compared to its predecessor, the Tianlian I system, the new generation relay satellite system will be significantly improved in mission planning, system management and task implementation.

With a more advanced data transmission rate and capability of multi-objective service, Tianlian II system will play an important role in improving transmission timeliness, in-orbit operation safety and task implementation flexibility, for medium- and low-Earth-orbit satellites and manned spacecraft.

This is the 129th mission for the Xichang Satellite Launch Center, and the 301st mission for the Long March carrier rocket series.
