Common Explanation:

So, from the code, we can see that there are some words are given with their codes and we have to decode them.

So, first we take the word BISCUIT. In this word, we will first count the number of alphabets in the word. If it is odd, then we will write $ and if it is even, then we will write @. So, in this word there are 7 alphabets, which means odd number, so $ sign is used.

Now, we will count the number of consonants in the word and write it. For this word there are 4 consonants.

Now we will take the 2nd letter and reverse it according to the alphabetical series. For I, reverse is R.

So, we will write the code as $4R.

Now, we take the word GURANTEE.

In this word, the number of letters are 8, which is even. So we will use the @ sign.

Now, the number of consonants in this word is 4.

Now we will take the reverse of its 2nd letter, which is U according to the alphabetical series is F.

So, the code is @4F.

1. We will first count the number of letters in this word is 9, which is odd. So, the sign is $.
- Now, we will see the number of consonants present in the word which is 5.
- Now, the reverse of H, which is the 2nd letter in this word is S.
- So, the code is $5S.
- Hence option C is correct.
2. We will first count the number of letters in this word is 8, which is even. So, the sign is @.
- Now, we will see the number of consonants present in the word which is 5.
- Now, the reverse of X, which is the 2nd letter in this word is C.
- So, the code is @5C.
- Hence option D is correct.
3. We will first count the number of letters in this word is 10, which is even. So, the sign is @.
- Now, we will see the number of consonants present in the word which is 6.
- Now, the reverse of N, which is the 2nd letter in this word is M.
- So, the code is @6M.
- Hence option C is correct.

4. We will first count the number of letters in this word is 6, which is even. So, the sign is @.

Now, we will see the number of consonants present in the word which is 4.

Now, the reverse of A, which is the 2nd letter in this word is Z.

So, the code is @4Z.

Hence option D is correct.

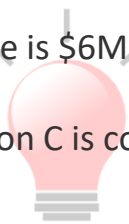

5. We will first count the number of letters in this word is 9, which is odd. So, the sign is $.

Now, we will see the number of consonants present in the word which is 6.

Now, the reverse of N, which is the 2nd letter in this word is M.

So, the code is $6M.

Hence option C is correct.
