Who: SIPRI

What: launched a new initiative named Global Registry of Violent Deaths

When: published on 5th May 2019

For the complete information kindly read the given lines:

The Stockholm International Peace Research Institute (SIPRI) has set up a new initiative named Global Registry of Violent Deaths (GReVD) to establish the annual number of violent deaths worldwide.

GReVD will track the number of deaths caused by all forms of violence and display these in an open-source database which will eventually help researchers, policymakers and the general public to track trends in violence at global, regional, national levels.

The initiative aims to monitor the progress on the world's commitment to 'significantly reduce all forms of violence and related death rates everywhere' by 2030 as set out in the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), specifically Goal 16.

The first-phase of the project will be funded by the Swedish Postcode Foundation and the United Kingdom's Department for International Development.

SDG 16 aims to promote peaceful and inclusive societies for sustainable development, provide access to justice for all and build effective, accountable and inclusive institutions at all levels.

Hints to Remember

Who: SpaceX

What: launches Falcon 9 rocket with Dragon spacecraft

When: published on 4th May 2019

Elon Musk's Space Exploration Technologies Corp. launched its 17th commercial resupply mission to the International Space Station for longtime customer NASA early.

The Falcon 9 rocket and Dragon space capsule rumbled aloft at about 2:48 a.m. local time from Cape Canaveral Air Force Station in Florida. Dragon will deliver almost 5,500 pounds of science, supplies and hardware, according to NASA, and is slated to attach to the station on Monday. SpaceX will attempt to recover Falcon 9's first stage on a droneship in the Atlantic Ocean.

SpaceX set a company record last year with 21 launches for customers. Much of the focus this year is on the first flight with humans on board. SpaceX and Boeing Co. have contracts with NASA to ferry American astronauts to the space station as part of the agency's Commercial Crew program.

SpaceX completed the Demo-1 flight of its "Crew Dragon" without humans on board in March. But in late April, the Dragon was engulfed in flames during a test, a mishap that probably will push back the commercial crew schedule.

Who: Japan

What: developed its private rocket called Momo-3

When: published on 5th May 2019

A Japanese aerospace startup successfully launched a small rocket on Saturday, making it the country's first privately developed model to reach outer space.

Interstellar Technology Inc. said the unmanned Momo-3 launched from its test site in Hokkaido and reached about 110 kilometers (68 miles) in altitude before falling into the Pacific Ocean after 10 minutes of flight time.

"It was a complete success. We'll work to achieve stable launches and mass-produce (rockets) in quick cycles," said company founder Takafumi Horie.

Measuring 10 meters in length and 50 centimeters in diameter and weighing 1 ton, it was first due to be launched Tuesday, but that launch was shelved due to a glitch in the fuel system.

On Saturday, the first launch attempt at 5 a.m. was called off at the last minute due to the detection of an abnormality. The cause of the problem was identified before the second attempt. According to the company, Momo-3 was launched at 5:45 a.m. and its liquid fuel was burned for about two minutes as planned.
