Who: Insomnia (Army Stories)

What: by Rachna Bisht Rawat. Ebury Press

When: published on 25th October 2020

When a book has the word Army in its title, one spontaneously imagines tales of valour. With Rachna Bisht Rawat's collection, titled 'Insomnia: Army Stories', a pleasant surprise awaits. More than heroic deeds, her collection captures emotions of men who guard the nation.

An Army officer's wife and sister, the author has seen the men in olive green from close quarters, so tales were always floating around her; but compiling those takes acumen and she has used it to the hilt.

A daredevil officer survives grievous injuries in battle and then gets killed in a freak accident, as a stray bullet pierces his head during a practice camp. 'The bloody bullet had his name written on it' is how his Brigadier father accepts the tragedy. A retired General is haunted by his past. 'The Kashmir posting was a bloody curse,' he says. Two soldiers, 'nameless, faceless', develop a unique bond from across the border at the world's highest battlefield, Siachen glacier; another one set in the same clime, where a dangerous rescue of a dog takes place and then a claim, 'Ham fauji hain. Apne saathiyon ko kabhi marne ke liye nahi chhortey', generates goosebumps. (Read more)
