Explanations:

1. We'll try to find the correct sequence of fragments using elimination technique here.

If we read the opening fragment clearly, we can deduce that the next fragment should continue with the name or purpose of the 'International Coalition'. The fragment B fits perfectly as the following fragment. Thus, opening fragment and fragment B make a mandatory pair.

This eliminates options A and D immediately.

Further, fragment B ends with 'yet' and fragment D begins with 'another' and they make sense together. Thus, fragment B and fragment D also make a mandatory pair. Option B also gets eliminated here.

Now, if we read the sequence of fragments given in option C, we find that they make a meaningful sentence together. Evidently, the correct sequence of fragments is: BDAC

Option C is hence the correct answer.

2. We'll try to find the correct sequence of fragments using elimination technique here.

If we read the opening fragment clearly, we can deduce that the presence of 'but' indicates that the following part is of an idea contrary to the portion given in bold. While the bold part speaks about global conditions, the fragment B opens with India's condition, thus confirming fragment B as the following fragment. Thus, opening fragment and fragment B make a mandatory pair.

This eliminates options A and D immediately.

Further, fragment B mentions ends with the mention of the Indian economy and fragment D opens with 'whose' i.e., it refers to the economy. Thus, fragment B and fragment D also make a mandatory pair. Option B also gets eliminated here.

Now, if we read the sequence of fragments given in option C, we find that they make a meaningful sentence together. Evidently, the correct sequence of fragments is: BDAC

Option C is hence the correct answer.

3. We'll try to find the correct sequence of fragments using elimination technique here.

If we read the opening fragment clearly, we can deduce that the next fragment should talk about different kinds of credit facilities. Since fragment C talks about banks it is confirmed that fragment B is the following fragment. Thus, opening fragment and fragment B make a mandatory pair.

This eliminates options A and C immediately.

Further, fragment C mentions ends with 'such' and fragment B begins with 'as' and continues with examples of banks. Thus, fragment C and fragment B also make a mandatory pair. Option D also gets eliminated here.

Now, if we read the sequence of fragments given in option B, we find that they make a meaningful sentence together. Evidently, the correct sequence of fragments is: CBDA

Option B is hence the correct answer.

4. We'll try to find the correct sequence of fragments using elimination technique here.

If we read the opening fragment clearly, we can deduce that the next fragment should continue explaining what the learning is about. This is done in fragment C and it is confirmed that fragment C is the following fragment. Thus, opening fragment and fragment C make a mandatory pair.

This eliminates options A and C immediately.

Further, fragment C ends with 'is' and fragment B begins with singular 'every reason'. Thus, fragment C and fragment B also make a mandatory pair. Option B also gets eliminated here.

Now, if we read the sequence of fragments given in option D, we find that they make a meaningful sentence together. Evidently, the correct sequence of fragments is: CBAD

Option D is hence the correct answer.

5. We'll try to find the correct sequence of fragments using elimination technique here.

Out of all the given options , only option B makes sense when paired with the fragment given in bold. Thus, opening fragment should be followed by fragment B.

This eliminates options B and D immediately.

Further, fragment B mentions cultivation and fragment A talks about areas where is cultivation is done despite being unsuitable for the crop. Thus, fragment B and fragment A also make a pair. Option C also gets eliminated here.

Now, if we read the sequence of fragments given in option A, we find that they make a meaningful sentence together. Evidently, the correct sequence of fragments is: BADC

Option A is hence the correct answer.

6. We'll try to find the correct sequence of fragments using elimination technique here.

If we read the opening fragment clearly, we can deduce that the original fragment can be followed by fragment C only, as 'was + V3 ' is grammatically correct.

Thus option A and option B are eliminated

Now option C and option D are left. For concluding the sentence, fragment D is a better option than fragment A. This eliminates option D.

Now, if we read the sequence of fragments given in option C, we find that they make a meaningful sentence together. Evidently, the correct sequence of fragments is: CBDA

Option C is hence the correct answer.

7. We'll try to find the correct sequence of fragments using elimination technique here.

If we read the opening fragment clearly, we can deduce that it can be followed by a verb. Fragment B starts with 'Krishna', it is hence unfit to follow the original fragment.

This eliminates option C immediately.

In case fragment D follows the original fragment, then further fragment D and fragment B do not make a relevant pair. Thus option B is also eliminated.

We are now left with option A (CBAD) and option D (CABD) as fragment C will surely follow the opening fragment. Fragment C cannot be followed by fragment A as it will be grammatically wrong. So option D is also wrong.

Now, if we read the sequence of fragments given in option A, we find that they make a meaningful sentence together. Evidently, the correct sequence of fragments is: CBAD

Option A is hence the correct answer.

8. The arrangement ABCD is correct grammatically and contextually.

Option E is hence the correct answer.

9. We'll try to find the correct sequence of fragments using elimination technique here.

If we read the opening fragment clearly, we can deduce that the fragment A and fragment B cannot follow it as 'became' will be grammatically incorrect

This eliminates option C and option D.

Further, the absence of article 'the' in fragment B makes it incorrect to follow fragment D.

This eliminates option A.

Now, if we read the sequence of fragments given in option B, we find that they make a meaningful sentence together. Evidently, the correct sequence of fragments is: DCBA

Option B is hence the correct answer.

- 10. Let us try to eliminate wrong options one by one .It can be deduced from the original fragment that it can be only followed by fragment B to make it grammatically relevant.

This eliminates option C.

Further, we see that fragment B and fragment A make a mandatory pair.

This eliminates option A and option B.

Now, if we read the sequence of fragments given in option D, we find that they make a meaningful sentence together. Evidently, the correct sequence of fragments is: BADC

Option D is hence the correct answer.
