Explanations:

1. The first sentence should seem like an introduction to the topic. After reading all the sentences, statement C seems to be the most appropriate choice. It speaks about India’s hope to end its present exclusion from global value chains.

Further, statement E picks up where fragment C has left off and they make sense together. The sentence starts with ‘in parallel’ which indicates other measures that are to be taken to make India’s hopes come true. Thus, fragment C and fragment E make a pair.

Now, if we read the sentences carefully, we find that statement E mentions ‘dumping of goods’ from China and statement A carries on with the mention of ‘unfair trade practices’ and how goods made in China are routed. They make a meaningful sentence together. Thus, fragment E and fragment A also make a mandatory pair. So far, the correct sequence of statements is: CEA

The fourth sentence should add meaning to the idea being formed. A complete ban on Chinese goods would be impractical and the government should also consider imports to be an essential part of India’s trade competitiveness. Hence, the correct sequence of statements is: CEADB

Option D is hence the correct answer.
